Abstract

The rule "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" is a fundamental principle in the science of fiqh which emphasizes that beliefs that have been formed cannot be erased by doubt. This concept is not only relevant in the context of Islamic law, but also has significant implications in the formation of independent individual character. This research aims to explore how the application of this rule can shape individual attitudes and behavior in facing life's challenges. By emphasizing the importance of strong beliefs and overcoming doubts, individuals can develop a sense of self-confidence and independence in decision making. Through a qualitative approach, this study analyzes various psychological and social aspects related to these rules, as well as their impact on self-development. The research results show that understanding and applying the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" can increase an individual's mental resilience and independence, thereby encouraging them to become more responsible and proactive individuals in everyday life. Thus, this rule is not only a guideline in a religious context, but also a basis for creating independent and competitive individuals.

Keywords: concept, rules of ushul fiqh, independent person

1. Introduction

Individual independence is one of the fundamental aspects in the development of human character. In an era of globalization characterized by the complexity of information and ever-growing challenges, the ability to stand alone, make the right decisions and act independently becomes increasingly crucial. Independence is not only related to material or financial aspects, but also includes psychological and spiritual dimensions. Independent individuals have the ability to think critically, adapt to change, and take responsibility for their choices and actions.

One of the principles that can support the formation of this independent character is the principle "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki." This rule comes from the tradition of fiqh in Islam and contains the meaning that beliefs that have been formed cannot be erased by doubt. In this context, belief becomes a strong foundation for individuals to remain firm in their convictions and decisions, even when faced with various challenges and doubts. The application of this rule is not only relevant in the context of Islamic law, but also has significant implications in everyday life.

In the midst of various information and external influences that are often confusing, it is important for individuals to have solid beliefs. Uncertainty and doubt can hinder a person's ability to act independently and responsibly. For example, when making important decisions, such as choosing a career, education, or social relationships, individuals who do not have strong beliefs tend to get caught up in doubt and confusion, which can ultimately lead to less than optimal decisions. On the other hand, individuals who understand and apply the principle of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki" tend to be better able to overcome doubts and take the necessary steps to achieve their goals.

Furthermore, this rule can also be a tool to increase mental resilience. In facing life's challenges, individuals who have strong beliefs will be better able to recover from failure and learn from experience. They are not easily influenced by other people's opinions or unfavorable situations, because they have built a solid foundation of beliefs. Therefore, understanding and applying these rules can contribute to the formation of individuals who are not only independent, but also resilient and proactive.

This research aims to explore the relationship between the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki" and the formation of independent individual character. Through a qualitative approach, this study will analyze how strong beliefs can influence individual attitudes and behavior, and how this contributes to positive self-development. By examining various psychological and social aspects related to the application of this rule, it is hoped that this research can provide new insight into the importance of the "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki" rule in creating individuals who are not only religious, but also competitive and able to face the challenges of the times.

Finally, it is hoped that the results of this research can become a reference for educators, parents and society in efforts to form a generation that is independent and characterized, as well as encouraging individuals to develop strong beliefs within themselves. Thus, this rule is not only a guideline in a religious context, but also a basis for creating individuals who are independent, responsible and able to contribute positively to society.

2. Research Methods

This research uses a qualitative approach to explore the relationship between the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki" and the formation of independent individual character. This method was chosen because it allows researchers to gain a deep understanding of individual experiences, views and attitudes regarding the application of these rules in everyday life. The following are the steps taken in this research:

Research Design

This research uses a case study design with a focus on individuals who have applied the principles of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki" in their lives. This design allows researchers to explore in depth the context and experiences of each participant.

Participants

Participants in this research consisted of 15 individuals from various backgrounds, including students, professionals and the general public. The criteria for selecting participants were them who has an understanding of these rules and can provide insight into their application in everyday life. Participants will be recruited through a purposive sampling approach, where researchers select individuals who are considered relevant to the research focus.

Data Collection

Data will be collected through in-depth interviews and focus group discussions. In-depth interviews were conducted to explore personal experiences and individual views regarding the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisiyaki," as well as their impact on their independence. Focus group discussions will provide an opportunity for participants to share experiences and opinions, so as to enrich the data obtained.

Research Instrument

The research instrument was an interview guide and focus group discussion guide that had been prepared previously. This guide includes open-ended questions designed to explore aspects such as understanding of the rules, experiences of application in daily life, and perceived impact on character and independence.

Data analysis

Data obtained from interviews and focus group discussions will be analyzed using thematic analysis techniques. This process includes several stages, namely:

- Transcription: Transcribe all interviews and focus group discussions into text form.
- Coding: Identifying and coding themes that emerge from the data.
- Analysis: Grouping relevant themes and analyzing the relationship between the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" and the character of individual independence.
- Interpretation: Draw conclusions based on the analysis carried out and relate them to existing literature.

Validity and Reliability

To ensure the validity and reliability of the research, researchers will use data triangulation, namely comparing information obtained from interviews, focus group discussions, and other relevant sources. In addition, researchers will also ask for feedback from participants regarding the results of the analysis to ensure that the interpretations made are in accordance with their experiences.

Research Ethics

This research will adhere to the principles of research ethics, including obtaining consent from participants before interviews are conducted, maintaining the confidentiality of participants' identities, and ensuring that participants can withdraw from the research at any time without consequences.

By using this method, it is hoped that this research can provide in-depth insight into the application of the "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" principle and its impact on the formation of independent individual character. It is hoped that the results of this research can contribute to the development of theory and practice in character education and self-development.

3. Results and Discussion

3.1. Results

The results of this research indicate that the application of the "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" principle contributes significantly to increasing individual independence. Participants who understand this rule tend to be better able to overcome doubt and uncertainty in their lives, and have better life skills. This research also found that social support and a positive environment are very important in implementing this rule.

Based on the research results, several implications can be drawn:

• Character building

Educational institutions must pay attention to the importance of character education that emphasizes spiritual values and life philosophy. This character education can help form individuals who are more independent and responsible.

• Social Support

Educational institutions must build strong support networks to help students and students maintain their beliefs and overcome doubts.

• Training Program

Educational institutions should develop training programs that focus on developing self-confidence, decision-making skills, and risk management.

• Life Skills Development

Educational institutions must pay attention to the importance of developing important life skills, such as the ability to solve problems, adapt to change, and manage emotions. Thus, the results of this research can help form individuals who are more independent, confident, and ready to face future challenges.

3.2. Discussion

The results of this research provide in-depth insight into the relationship between the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" and the formation of independent individual character. From the analysis of the data obtained, several important points can be discussed further:

- Understanding the Rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki"

Most participants demonstrated a good understanding of this rule, emphasizing the importance of faith in the face of doubt. This rule, which means "faith will not be lost because of doubt," is the basis for many individuals in making decisions. This research found that participants who understood this rule tended to be better able to overcome doubt and uncertainty in their lives. This is in line with the literature which states that strong beliefs can be the main driver in decision making and action. When individuals have solid beliefs, they tend to be better able to overcome challenges and stay focused on their goals. This suggests that education about spiritual values and life philosophies can contribute to better character development.

Apart from that, a deep understanding of these rules also reflects how individuals can internalize these values in everyday life. Many participants stated that they applied this principle in various aspects of life, from education, career, to social relationships. Thus, this rule is not only a theory, but also a real practice in their lives.

- Impact on Independence

This research found that the application of the principle "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki" contributed significantly to increasing individual independence. Participants reported that strong beliefs helped them make better decisions and be braver in facing risks. This independence is not only limited to material aspects, but also includes emotional and social aspects. For example, some participants stated that their faith made them braver to pursue their dreams and aspirations, despite the risk of failure. This is in line with positive psychology theory which states that individuals who have high self-confidence tend to be more independent and proactive in achieving their goals.

This research also shows that independence built through confidence can improve an individual's quality of life, because they feel more responsible for their decisions and actions. This independence also contributes to the development of important life skills, such as the ability to solve problems, adapt to change, and manage emotions. In other words, the independence gained through the application of this rule is not only impacts individuals personally, but also on their interactions with other people and the surrounding environment.

- Positive and Negative Experiences

Although many participants reported positive experiences, some also expressed the challenges they faced. The doubts that arise in difficult situations show that although confidence is important, external factors such as social pressure and environmental expectations also play a large role. Some participants expressed that they experienced doubts when facing very complex or high-risk situations, such as choosing a career or making a decision important in life. This shows that independence does not only depend on individual beliefs, but also on social support and a supportive environment.

This research also found that individuals who had negative experiences in applying this rule tended to be more careful in making decisions in the future, which could affect their independence. For example, some participants who had experienced failure in achieving a goal felt more hesitant to try again, even though they understood the importance of confidence. This suggests that past experiences can shape an individual's thought patterns and behavior, which in turn influences their independence.

- The Role of the Environment and Social Support

This research highlights the importance of social support in implementing the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyaki." Participants who had support from family, friends, or mentors felt more confident and able to maintain their beliefs. This social support serves as a confidence booster for individuals, helping them to stay focused on their goals even in the face of doubt. This suggests that a positive social environment can strengthen individuals' beliefs and help them overcome doubts.

Additionally, this research also found that individuals who feel pressured by social expectations or criticism often experience greater self-doubt, which can hinder their development of independence. Therefore, it is important for individuals to build a strong support network to help them remain steadfast in their beliefs.

• Recommendations for Application in Education

Based on the research results, researchers recommend that educational institutions integrate the concept of independence and the application of this rule in the curriculum. Training programs that focus on developing self-confidence, decision-making skills, and risk management can help students and students to be better prepared to face future challenges. In addition, character education that emphasizes spiritual values and life philosophy can help form more independent and responsible individuals.

This research also recommends that educational institutions pay attention to the importance of social support in implementing this rule. Building a strong support network, such as mentorship, peer support, and discussion groups, can help students and students maintain their beliefs and overcome doubts. In this way, educational institutions can help form individuals who are more independent, confident and ready to face future challenges.

4. Conclusion

Based on the results of research that has been carried out, it can be concluded that the rule "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyyaki" has a significant influence on the formation of independent individual character. This research shows that understanding and applying these rules helps individuals overcome doubt and uncertainty, thereby increasing their independence in various aspects of life.

Several important points that can be concluded from this research are:

- The Importance of Beliefs: Strong beliefs serve as a foundation for decision making and action. Individuals who understand and apply this rule tend to be more confident and brave in facing challenges.
- Positive Impact on Independence: The application of the principle of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyyaki" contributes to increasing individual independence, both in material and emotional aspects. This independence allows individuals to be responsible for their decisions and actions.
- Environmental Influence and Social Support: Support from the social environment, such as family, friends, and mentors, is very important in strengthening individual beliefs. A positive environment can help individuals overcome doubts and stay focused on their goals.
- Challenges Faced: Despite many positive experiences, individuals also face challenges and doubts, especially in complex situations. Negative experiences can influence an individual's thought patterns and behavior, which in turn can affect their independence.
- Recommendations for Education: This research recommends that educational institutions integrate the concept of independence and this rule in the curriculum. Training programs that focus on developing self-confidence, decision-making skills and risk management are essential to developing more independent and responsible individuals.

Overall, this research confirms that the application of the rules of "Alyaqinu La Yuzalu Bisyyaki" not only contributes to the development of individual character, but can also improve their quality of life. By understanding and applying this principle, individuals can become more independent, confident, and ready to face various challenges in the future. helping business actors and consumers understand business ethics in accordance with sharia, so that buying and selling practices can be carried out more ethically and sustainably.

Recommendations for Better Practices: To increase the application of Islamic Law principles in buying and selling second hand goods, it is recommended that educational institutions, community organizations and the government work together in organizing education and outreach programs. This is expected to create a business environment that is fairer and in accordance with sharia values.

Thus, this research contributes to a better understanding of the practice of buying and selling second hand goods from an Islamic Law perspective, as well as encouraging business actors to pay more attention to ethical and legal aspects in every transaction carried out.
